Whoa! It is tough to cover 50 years since high school without seriously boring everyone. So here's an encapsulated version. I definitely zig-zagged a bit. I attended UW-Seattle, graduating in mechanical engineering.

Married in 1967 Susan McGee (NSHS '63). We lived in Boston and then in Munich three years each) where I worked as an engineer and Susan taught primary grades. We returned from the 'old country' in '73 at which time I took a pre-dental year at the UW-Seattle. I was lucky enough to enter dental school (UW) one year later in '74 and after finishing, I established a solo practice in Olympia.

That was one of the zigs, and now for a zag. I taught a bit at the UW dental school while in Olympia and discovered I wanted more of it. So we packed up as a family of five, and headed off to the University of Michigan for two years for post-doc training in the field of dental materials. In 1983, I joined the UW School of Dentistry as full-time faculty member and have been at it since.

I maintained an outside private practice in Seattle albeit on a part-time basis given restrictions associated with a full-time UW appointment. I have very much enjoyed the mix of teaching, research and practice and do not yet have plans to retire from the UW. But Susan is tugging on me to take the plunge at least partially. For full disclosure, I discontinued my outside practice a few years back which reduced the stress factor enormously.

Our three children are married and with children. Erika (George) and family are in Portland and our boys, wives and kids live on Queen Anne hill in Seattle not far from us. We seem to be overly busy like all of you, but no complaints. For R&R, we can be found quite often enjoying rural life at our place in my hometown of Naselle in SW Washington.
